London Design Festival 2019: Bohinc Studio creates Lunar House with spatial treatment of a listed townhouse

- The Lunar House is Bohinc Studio's first solo exhibition in London, at the heart of the King's Cross Design District.
- A complete sensory and spiritual experience pop-up exhibition
- Presenting new designs for boxes and a new vase

From 16 to 21 September 2019, Bohinc Studio opens its doors with the Lunar House, a pop up exhibition to mark the Moon landing's 50th anniversary during this year's London Design Festival. Space and planets continue to inspire the designs of Lara Bohinc, who presents aptly named new pieces such as the Jupiter vase and the Juno box at the Lunar House, alongside the freshly launched Planetaria collection.

With the Lunar House, Bohinc Studio presents its signature style in a full interior set up for the first time. The brand comes to life through Lara's spatial treatment of a Victorian townhouse in the King's Cross Design District. Curved undulated walls mix with period and futuristic aesthetics. The walls and floor are dark petrol blue, like the cosmos itself, and the objects and furniture dot the space like stars in the sky. The pieces in cream, tomato red, and sky blue colours, highlighted by brass frames, complement and contrast the dark space. 'Colour has always been an important part of my design aesthetic, adds Lara Bohinc. I love to use it to highlight contrasts and create bold statements'.

The space is a complete sensory and spiritual experience. For the Lunar House, Lara Bohinc collaborates with Pandora's Jukebox for the soundscape and Perfumer's Story for the olfactive environment. Visitors will also have a chance to book workshops and readings by Madeleine Botet de Lacaze from Astrology for Artists, whose presence at the Lunar House adds a spiritual element.

The Jupiter Vase

Named after the planet Jupiter, the new Jupiter vase features a brass bullet shaped vase and a base in 3-D milled Carrara marble. The vase can be removed from its rainbow shaped base.

Dimensions: 330 x h 390mm

The Saturn and Pluto Box

The box's interlocking shapes reference this year's exceptional planetary conjunction between Saturn and Pluto. The Saturn and Pluto box features three brass round compartments with tops in calcatta, red travertine and portoro marble.

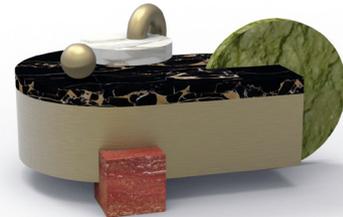

Dimensions: 250 x 200 x h 110mm

The Juno Box

Bohinc Studio's new Juno box comprises a large brass body and a smaller round compartment. Details in green ming, red travertine, calcatta and portoro marbles add a playful, almost feminine, touch to the otherwise predominantly geometric design.

Dimensions: 315 x 210 x h 150mm

All the new pieces are made in Portugal using a mix of handmade metalwork and 3-D milled marble parts.

The Lunar House is Bohinc Studio's first solo exhibition in London. 'I continue to believe in London's status as one of Europe's, and the world's, most exciting creative capitals. As a Slovenian born British designer, I conceive all my creations in London to then produce them in Italy and Portugal. This year's London Design Festival is the perfect moment to demonstrate my love for London and the city's tolerant and truly European nature.' Concludes Lara Bohinc.

About Lara Bohinc:

Lara Bohinc founded Bohinc Studio in 2016 for the exploration of furniture and object design.

Bohinc's ability to create work of iconic beauty is rooted in her familiarity with materials and manufacturing approaches. While retaining a deep respect for the traditional principles of her craft, she has also drawn on her knowledge of industrial techniques, fusing modernity of style with function, to achieve a contemporary elegance. The same principles angular yet feminine.

Bohinc recently had a solo show at MAO (Museum for Architecture and Design) in Ljubljana, Slovenia.

In April 2019, Bohinc Studio presented a new collection of furniture and objects for the home during Salone del Mobile 2019 for the third consecutive year.
