PRESS RELEASE

19th – 20th September 2019

Oval Space, London
www.encode.info

Data is no longer communication's secret weapon. Society has quickly learned to instinctively decode the data-driven visuals and stories that surround us every day. We are becoming native speakers of this new language of information.

And this ability to understand increasingly sophisticated messages gives designers and journalists far more freedom to experiment. To challenge. To tell more and show more. How far can we take it?

As part of London Design Festival 2019, Encode will be a two-day festival exploring the intersection of data design, journalism and education in London. Bringing the creative community together to share and explore the future of data-driven stories.

More than 30 practitioners from across the globe, educators, and leaders in the field will engage, share and debate the way we read and interact with data.

Speakers include:

Stefanie Posavec
Andy Kirk
Clever Frank
Bloomberg
Signal Noise
The Economist
Field
Territory
The Pudding
Financial Times
Pitch Interactive
