Dates for the Jewellery Clambake – Cox & Power for the London Design Festival 2019

The Jewellery Clambake is a get-together at the Cox & Power studio in Marylebone's Chiltern Street to talk all things jewellery: craftsmanship, design, provenance and what makes a piece of Cox & Power jewellery unique.

Bring along your thoughts, ideas and any jewellery you may not love as much as you'd like to and talk about transforming them into something new that combines the Cox & Power design sensibility with your own personality and style.

Tuesday 17 September 3-5pm
Wednesday 18 September 6-8pm
no booking necessary

Tony Power, Rachel Sweeney and the Cox & Power team will reveal the provenance of their designs - from inspiration to the source of their materials; why they work with Fairtrade and Fairmined gold and the people, processes and artistry involved in the creation of Cox & Power jewellery.

Join either the afternoon or evening gathering to talk about transforming your thoughts or existing pieces into a piece of jewellery you will love for life. Or if you prefer, make an appointment to sit down with Tony Power and discuss your ideas one-to-one.

Step inside their story and discover how an idea or an unloved jewel can be transformed into a precious new piece to treasure forever.

About Cox & Power

The touchstone for modern jewellery design for over 25 years, Cox & Power brings a fresh approach to an ancient craft, combining authentic local craftsmanship with a global curiosity. They are the only goldsmiths creating and exhibiting their jewellery in London's West End and as co-founders of Fair Luxury, their new designs have a provenance that goes right back to the source with collections made with Fairtrade and Fairmined Gold.
