

28 August 2019
For Immediate Release

Does Luxury Still Count?

13 September 2019, 6.15pm
at Cox & Power
10-12 Chiltern Street
London W1U 7PX

Does Luxury Still Count explores the nature of luxury as part of the London Design Festival 2019.

Mimma Vignozzi, Creative Consultant, broadcaster and Editor of Show Studio, will be joined in conversation with Tony Power and Rachel Sweeney of renowned jewellers Cox & Power and Lorna Watson, founder of traceable artisan-made bag brand STELAR.

They will share an insight into what motivates and makes them tick, talk about their common values and explore how an original desire to create beautiful objects led them to a new, more transparent approach that reveals the provenance of their materials, sustains traditional craft skills and gives their customers the ability to connect with the people, processes and artistry involved in their pieces.

They will present the case that fine craftsmanship and design combined with a sincere approach to sustainability and ethics can elevate the value and meaning of luxury.

This is a ticketed event; please contact marylebone@coxandpower.com to reserve a place.

ends

Notes to Editor:

About Cox & Power

The touchstone for modern jewellery design for over 25 years, Cox & Power brings a fresh approach to an ancient craft, combining authentic local craftsmanship with a global curiosity. They are the only goldsmiths creating and exhibiting their jewellery in London's West End and as co-founders of Fair Luxury, their new designs have a provenance that goes right back to the source with collections made with Fairtrade and Fairmined Gold.

Cox & Power
10-12 Chiltern Street
London W1U 7PX

open Mon-Sat 10.30–6pm

marylebone@coxandpower.com
coxandpower.com
@coxandpower

For more information contact

Rachel Sweeney
sweeney@coxandpower.com
020 79353530